Advance Care Planning

Planning in Advance for Future
Healthcare Choices

As a capable adult, you have many rights when you receive healthcare. You have the right to be told about your medical choices and their benefits and risks. You also have the right to accept or refuse these choices. Whatever you decide, it is important to talk about your decisions with your physician, other health professionals and those close to you. You may also put your plans for future medical care in writing, in case you become unable to make your own decisions.

Advanced Care Planning

Advanced care planning is a process for you to: understand possible future health choices; reflect on these choices in light of the values and goals important to you; discuss your choices with those close to you and the health professionals who care for you; and make a plan for future healthcare situations.

Start Planning Now

This process may only take a short period of time or it may take many months. What is most important is that you begin now and take the time you need to understand, reflect, discuss, and make a plan that will work best for you and those close to you.

Advanced Directives

An advanced directive is the plan you make for future healthcare. In this plan you may simply provide instructions about the choices you would prefer for future healthcare. You may also appoint another person or persons who would make your healthcare decisions if you were unable to make them yourself.

Your advanced directive may be a formal, legal document or you may choose to communicate your choices more informally in a letter or by simply talking. In many circumstances, however, a formal, legal document that clearly reflects your goals and values may be the best way to ensure that your choices can be followed in the future.

The two basic advance care documents are the Living Will and the Power of Attorney for Healthcare.

The Living Will states you do not want death delaying procedures used if you develop a terminal and irreversible condition.

A Power of Attorney for Healthcare allows you to designate someone to make decisions for you in any situation in which you are unable to do so.

Some advance directive documents combine the features of both the Living Will and the Power of Attorney for Healthcare.

As long as you are capable, you may change or revoke your advanced directive at any time.

Emergency Care

Your medical record (including any written advance directive) may not be instantly available in a medical crisis. In the event that medical staff are unclear about your advance directive or do not have it, they will begin emergency care that may sustain your life. Treatment can be stopped if it is clear later that the treatment is not what you wanted.

We assume you want cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) attempted in the event your heart or breathing stops. We also assume that CPR should be attempted during any type of invasive or risky procedure or test even if you have said that CPR is not desired. If you do not want CPR attempted, either in or outside the facility, please tell your doctor and other healthcare providers.

Conflicting Views

If you have a concern about your physician respecting your choices, you or those representing you may consider transferring care to another physician or requesting consultation with the Ethics Committee.
